

Thomas Brigger

role

Director of Education

Istituto Marangoni School of Fashion Paris

After graduating from Istituto Marangoni Milano, Thomas Brigger worked as a designer and creative director in Milan and Paris. In 2008 he was appointed Leader of Fashion Design programmes at the Istituto Marangoni School in Paris, as well as teaching art and economics at several other universities in France and Switzerland.

In 2010, Thomas founded try.sarl, an independent creative consultancy practice based in Paris, and started cooperating with several international companies. Besides his work as a coordinator for several projects within the ready-to-wear sector, Thomas has also embarked on real men's tailoring, an experience culminating in the launch of his exclusive brand proportio in 2011.

In 2012, he successfully obtained a Post Graduate Certificate in Higher Education at Manchester Metropolitan University. Recently promoted to Director of Education for the Paris School, Thomas oversees and manages all courses in Fashion Design, and continues to convey his experience as an entrepreneur, professional fashion consultant, and senior tutor.