- to provide a learning experience that is informed by research, scholarship, reflective practice and engagement with fashion and design industry and the professions.

3. Course Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the Fashion Design short course, students will be able to:

- engage with a variety of drawing techniques and processes for design and illustration;
- be introduced to the main principles of collection design and development;
- become familiar with the basic financial and commercial considerations of collection design;
- support creative ideas with appropriate technical information;
- create a contemporary collection referencing current trends and influences relevant to the target market.

4. Teaching/Learning and Assessment StrategyCurriculum:

The course gives participants the opportunity to learn the basic fundamental elements of fashion design. The student learns how creative ideas are formulated and communicated to a target audience in addition to the importance of the financial and commercial considerations of the designer's role.

Week 1: participants are given an introduction to drawing and design techniques used in fashion design followed by an analysis of the founding principles of developing a fashion collection. This consists of the study of silhouette, colour palettes, the appropriate use of fabrics and the financial considerations of designing fashion.

Week 2: in the second week participants will begin creative research and use their personal inspiration to develop silhouettes and co-ordinate outfits in addition to using colour and fabric. They also focus on trends, where they come from and how they influence a contemporary collection.

Week 3: the final week is intended to draw all the elements together from the previous weeks culminating in designing an entire collection based on personal inspiration and supported by technical information. Participants will be assessed through the presentation of their work to their tutors and will receive critique and feedback on their progress through the course.

Participants have the opportunity to demonstrate their achievement of the intended learning outcomes through a variety of tests appropriate to their field of study.

Assessment:Formative Assessments:

This consists in a daily interaction with the tutors that through feedback help the trainees to adopt a critical appraisal of their own learning experience, and helps them assess their own performance in relation to the learning outcomes set for each element of study.

Summative Assessments:

These are formal assessments and are a means of gauging trainee learning, at a particular point in time, relative to established marking criteria (Learning Outcomes). Summative assessments can occur during as well as at the end of each unit on specific evidence of trainee work, examples as follows:

Portfolio Assessment > is used to assess a variety of projects that have been developed throughout the unit and contained within a single folder or portfolio. Portfolio assessment could take a variety of formats depending on the subject and stipulated by the tutor.

Practical and class-based projects > allow students to apply their theoretical understanding of a specific subject area.

Written Reports > are required in some study areas and these will in some cases be a response to industry briefs, allowing students to reflect real industry requirements and to present work to industry standards through report writing.

Presentations > are used in some subjects to allow students to develop their creative, professional communication and presentation skills, formalising their arguments in a critical manner. When giving presentations students are actively encouraged to embrace new technologies and media in an innovative way where appropriate.
